Usually I don’t like taking showers, I don't know why. Maybe because it makes me tired, I feel I might lose something fun and interesting going around the house, as I’m soaping my arms in the bathroom. I’m totally wasting an important time of my life here.

Of course I’m not saying I don’t take showers, because I do. But it’s not always that I like doing it. There is one thing that makes me want to take a shower, though. The perfect Dove soap, the original one specifically. It makes me wanna be clean and comfy, just like it smells like. Everytime I open its box I already feel embraced by its scent. It’s not easy to describe, it is the personification of cleaning. It’s cozy, a cold rainy day with hot chocolate, warm blanket and a great book. That’s what that smell is. It’s not sweet, it’s not floral, it’s pure and plain. It’s the smell of heaven, nothing corrupted it, it’s just perfect. As I soap my body with it I feel more and more peaceful and calm. Almost sleeping. Then after the shower the smell spread around all over the place and that is the best moment of my day. As soon as I feel it I know I will be fine, clean and fresh. It sucks that I keep forgetting to buy it and then I have to take showers with the random boring soaps my mom buys.